

Protecting What Is Most Important

Integrated Security System

McRoberts Security Technologies specializes in custom system design, integration technology, installation, and service of security management systems and their components: access control, closed-circuit television, and alarm and intrusion detection. Each system is comprised of state-of-the-art technologies, and each installation is executed and maintained by our team of well-trained, highly skilled McRoberts technicians.

System design plans are implemented with a practical approach to help configure an integrated security solution that is efficient and cost-effective. McRoberts also provides the following professional commercial security services: system consultation, project management and coordination, system installation and commissioning, system training, maintenance, and service.

Access Control

McRoberts Security Technologies provides an array of access control systems to meet your needs for electronic security. Whether it's a smaller system solution or a fully integrated electronic system, each incorporates "best-of-breed" electronic security components. We also offer more specialized access control solutions, such as infant, patient, staff, and asset monitoring systems.

Closed-Circuit TV

Whether providing just a few stand alone cameras for viewing only or implementing comprehensive video management systems with digital recorders for large customers with hundreds of cameras, McRoberts Security Technologies can design the right closed-circuit television systems for your needs.

Intrusion Detection

McRoberts offers industry leading intrusion detection systems that can be easily integrated with other security components to create the most effective security systems. McRoberts intrusion detection systems help protect against unauthorized entry and robbery. Systems can include features such as motion sensors and window and door protection.

About McRoberts Security Technologies

McRoberts Security Technologies has been configuring and installing security systems since 1992. McRoberts builds customized security solutions that work with “best of breed” third-party products and can often leverage existing infrastructure so we can deliver the best tailored security system for your facility. With hundreds of systems installed across North America, McRoberts has established itself as a trusted industry leader with the experience, expertise, and a proven track record.

McRoberts Security Technologies is a subsidiary of McRoberts Protective Agency, Inc., which has been setting the standard in uniform guard services since 1876.
